ATTACK ON BUS LINE IS SECRET

Insidious Propaganda Offers P. E. Betterments
as Alternative

TO STULTIFY PLAN
Opposition Makes Covered Thrust at City's Effort

An insidious propaganda to defect the proposed Glendale municipal bus line is spreading in the city.
The propaganda is circulated by Glendaleans who have influential friends in the city.
"It has taken the form of a bar" gain with the P. E., as yet intangible, but seductive, particularly to those who own automobiles.
Briefly, it is put forth in the form of a question. The question is:

"Would you withdraw your support of the proposed Glendale municipal bus line if, in return, the Pacific Electric company should agree to lower its tracks and pave its right of way along Brand boulevard from one end to the other?"

No more interesting bribe for stultification of a popular movement could be offered to the citizens of the city.

The company has, heretofore, refused to consider any such road betterments.

The propagandists do not hold out anything definite, any promise by the company that these betterments will be made.
They have merely asked the questions, without any particular authorization from the company.
They have presented no credentials and, insofar as the company is concerned, they are volunteers in the service of the Pacific Electric. Their personal interest in attempting to kill the bus line has puzzled those who have been approached.

So far as can be learned, for the work has been carried on secretly among the leading and influential men of Glendale, the general answer has been such as to discomfort the volunteer workers for the P. E.

A number of Glendale business men have told those, whose names are not revealed, that they do not intend to align with the company.
And that they intend to continue the fight to compel the Pacific
Electric to lower its rails and pave its right of way.

The full extent of the work of the propagandists who are offering as a bribe what might be honestly offered by the company to the community at large, is not known. The names of those spreading the propaganda are withheld by those who have been approached.

C. OF C. EXECUTIVES ATTEND LUNCHEON

The Glendale chamber of commerce was represented at the regular meeting and luncheon of the Los Angeles chamber yesterday by President Val Hollister, Secretary Jas. M. Rhoades and Assistant Secretary E. F. Sanders.
Merrill Thorpe, editor of the magazine "The Nation's Business," which is affiliated with the national chamber of commerce, was the principal speaker. He chose as his topic for address, "Business Is Business." This talk made an impression on the Glendale delegation inasmuch as Mr. Thorpe took an entirely opposite view of this phrase.

Mr. Thorpe said that the placing of the United States government on a business basis had done considerable toward elevating business to a higher plane. He termed the government of the nation as a business institution with President Harding as president and general manager of the firm.
Other departments of the government, said Mr. Thorpe, are subordinate to the directions of the general manager. He said that through the placing of the government on a business basis that business has been elevated and now stands side by side with the professions, and plays as important a part in the building up of the government and society as do the professions.

Ever Write Letter That Sizzled Paper on Which You Wrote?

Did you ever write a sizzling letter, one that was biting, hateful, bitter and sarcastic—
one that would take the hide off, a model of invective, full of blistering adjectives and hate?

In "The Listening Post" tonight Mr. Foley tells of such a letter and what the man who wrote it did with it. You will find it a mighty interesting discourse and we recommend that you read it this evening.

We would also like to have you read the column and a

Henry James in his comment on the day's news says that the assumption of certain classes that labor has no right to organize and that it must be forced to do so, is, in return, often reaches the pitch of ac-this matter in an intelligent manner and says that doubt-

31 NATIONS ASSEMBLE AT GENOA

To Settle Economic Future of Europe at Meeting

FINANCES DISCUSSED
U. S. Absence Regretted
by Delegates Attending Convention

(Copyright, 1922, by United Press)
LONDON, April 6.—Statesmen of 31 nations are arriving in Genoa for the economic conference which opens Monday, April 10.

East meets West, communism confers with capitalism and leading diplomats of the old world face spokesmen of the new in preliminary parleys in the ancient Italian port city.

Rehabilitation of war-racked Europe is the aim that has brought over 1000 delegates, advisers and experts to the council table of the most ambitious international gathering since Versailles.

Failure, the creation of the fresh rivalries and international complications are predicted as the Genoa conference gets under way, but many of the most astute statesmen of Europe, including Premier Lloyd George, are confident much good will be accomplished.

For the first time since the war, late enemy states meet on an equal footing, bolshevik leaders, recognized as representatives of Russia, confer with allied statesmen, and nations neutral during the war, as well as those born of the world conflict, have a voice in deliberations concerning the welfare of Europe and Asia.

The United States will be absent and already that absence has prejudiced the success of the conference.

As far as diplomatic initiative is concerned, Britain will probably play at Genoa the role filled by the United States at the Washington arms conference.

BORAH PREDICTS WAR IN EAST FROM PACTS

Charges Japan With Responsibility for Chita Clash

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Dangerous complications are brewing in the Far-East which may lead to war and involve the United States because of its ratification of the four-power Pacific treaty Senator Borah, Idaho, soon will inform the senate.

The recent Japanese-Chita clash is indicative of the situation and Borah will charge Japan with responsibility for this trouble.

Borah holds that Japan stirred up the row with the Chita republic, which culminated in rout of the Chita "red" troops with fairly heavy casualties.

Japanese messengers claim the Japanese ordered the "reds" to retire. Refusing to retire, they were shot down. The Chita representatives here say the Japanese played in bad faith; that they have put "agents provocateurs" in Chita to stir up trouble and thus furnish a pretext for longer Japanese occupation.

Borah who will undoubtedly be joined by other treaty opponents will indulge in a bit of "I told you so." He will argue that Japan's course in the Russian territory more than likely will spread to Pacific island territory thus calling for action under the treaty almost at its birth.

If Japan pursues its Chita tactics, extending them to Sakhalin or otherwise seeks to tighten her grasp on Russian land, then naught but warfare can result, Borah believes. And warfare in the East, he feels, cannot but involve Japan's allies of the Pacific coast. He feels that trouble between Japan and Russia is inevitable under Japanese methods and holds that the Japanese are now applying to Russian territory tactics which they long applied to China.

MILITIAMEN'S PAY AWAITS CLAIMANTS

Checks are being held by Capt. T. D. Watson at the Glendale Press office for the following present and former National Guard members, these being in payment for drill and other services rendered:
Burney L. Chandler, Henry H. Dryer, Horace Hagen, John Lambrecht, Otto P. Miller, Neal E. Sprinkle, Leleom C. Anthony, Hugh F. Batters, David L. Hanson, Herbert E. Weiglen, Arthur Rice, Clarence A. Lessard and Homer E. Lessard.

The Outfall Sewer

Great bodies move slowly but they never retract their progress. It is the best kind of progress.

The advisory committee on permanent sewer of the city council has adjourned until the Los Angeles taxpayers decide whether they prefer to have their sewer manholes blow off with the overgrown flow from their outfall—or build themselves another, a main trunk.

This main trunk in the interest of safeguarding the water supply of the great city is designed to serve Glendale and other cities in this district.

If the Los Angeles taxpayers are alive to their necessity, Glendale's sewer problem will be permanently solved without experimentation with any panacea of a temporary nature.

Los Angeles' problem, as indicated by the Glendale Daily Press, is more pressing than that of Glendale.

That of Glendale can obtain temporary solution, covering the period during which sewer construction is progressing, if it is to progress, if six industries in Glendale will adopt a broad-gauged policy the temporary problem of the city will be solved.

These six industries are the big factors in flow into a local sewer system. They are users of water in large quantities. As such they have a right to demand service in a sewer from the city.

But this right should not be pressed at the expense of the entire city.

Should these six industries, each for itself, arrange for caring for their own sewer disposal, for possibly three years, the temporary emergency will dwindle to the vanishing point.

So far as the city as a whole is concerned, it has done its part, for it has taken care of the business district with the new sewer plant. The residential districts can continue as they are without danger or expense to the city.

By marking time in this way, until the taxpayers of Los Angeles awaken fully to their duty, Glendale can be saved a big community debt and can turn all of its sewer funds in one direction, the starting of a connection with the Dayton avenue end of the main trunk outfall, as planned for Glendale by the city engineer of Los Angeles.

Incidentally, from now until the Los Angeles sewer bond election in August, it behooves every Glendelian who has a friend in Los Angeles to demand that he cast his vote for the Los Angeles sewer bonds in that city. Then invite him to live in Glendale under the new sewer arrangement that will follow.

By moving slowly the advisory committee has saved the city money.

ISSUES ARE JOINED SHRINE CLUB HAS IN BUS LINE FIGHT BEST MEETING OF CAREER

City in Final Brief
Answers P. E.
Contentions
Plan for Big Delegation to Visit Santa Barbara

The last brief of the city of Glendale in the fight to secure a permit from the Los Angeles board of public utilities to operate a municipally owned motor bus line was filed yesterday by C. D. Gulick, transportation manager for the city of Glendale.

The brief said in part that application for the permit to operate the bus line in Los Angeles has been pending for some time. That the people of Glendale are becoming impatient at the delay. In behalf of the people Mr. Gulick declared the situation justified asking the board to give the matter the earliest possible consideration and determine the matter.

The brief continues that in the brief submitted by the Pacific Electric company to the board, a travel check of the Glendale car line operated by that company, submitted as a part of that company's brief, stated that on Wednesday, one of the lightest travel days of the week, 1159 passengers were unable to secure seats. Mr. Gulick's reply contends that through this check made by the company that a similar check made by the city of Glendale is extremely conservative and serves to emphasize the inadequacy of the present service being rendered by the electric company.

Attorney Carr in his brief filed for the company said that the fares as proposed for the Glendale bus line were inadequate to cover operating expenses of the line and the fixed charges in connection therewith. The brief filed yesterday by Mr. Gulick answers this by saying that no doubt this conviction is based upon the experience of the management of the Pacific Electric company in operating about six busses in various parts of the territory served by them as extensions of their electric lines.

This opinion on the part of the railway counsel is no doubt sincere, further states the brief, as the type of busses used by the company are impractical, uneconomical and unsatisfactory both to the public and the operators. The brief also hints that an element of self interest may have had its influence in the conclusion reached by the attorney for the corporation.

Another reason for the establishment of the bus line is the fact that the nation is now in what is generally known and universally termed as a motor age. The motor car cannot be eliminated from either private use or from the field of transporting passengers and freight. The brief points out that it is a well known fact that the privately owned motor car has caused the breaking down of the

MARCH FIELD MAY BE ABANDONED

WASHINGTON, April 6.—If congress restricts the army to 115,000 men, March field, California, will be abandoned, it was declared today on high authority at the war department. No further troops will be sent to March field or any change in its status made until the army appropriations bill is finally passed and it is known whether that station can be retained, it was said.

COAL STRIKE PEACE PLAN WIPED OUT

Congressman Nolan Tells of House Committee
Failure

PROPOSAL REJECTED
Wisconsin Representative
Attacks Alleged Financial Conspiracy

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Hopes of the house labor committee for settling the coal strike through a conference of miners and operators, here April 10 were virtually wiped out today when Representative Nolan, California, chairman of the committee, announced that four operators and associates had rejected the peace proposals.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Big financial interests are back of the mine operators, making them "powerful and arrogant enough to defy the government itself" in the present coal dispute, Representative Browne, Wisconsin, charged today. He asserted that the railroads and the United States Steel corporation own 75 per cent of the coal mines of the country and that the railroads in turn are deminated by 12 large financial institutions.

Browne's charges have been placed before the house labor committee, which is making an investigation of the coal strike and seeking to bring about a conference of the operators and miners here next Monday to end the walkout.

Pittsburgh Vein Operators' association and Indiana operators have refused to enter the conference. Other operators in the central competitive fields will probably do likewise.

It is probable that a statement will be issued by the committee condemning the attitude of the operators. Action then will be pressed on the Bland resolution providing for the establishment of a federal commission to investigate the industry.

Browne charged that "a super-corporation" of financial interests "dominates the industrial life of the country" through their "control of the banking system, the railroads and the coal mines."

"A group of 25 men," Browne said, "control 82 per cent of the country's steam transportation systems, operating 211,280 miles of railroads. These 25 men divide transportation themselves and 192 directorships. They sit on the board of 93 class one railroads."

Browne charged that the following financial institutions make up the "super-corporation": J. P. Morgan & Co., First National Bank of New York, Equitable Trust Co., Guaranty Trust Co., Equitable Life Insurance Association of the United States; Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York; American Surety Co.; Mechanics and Metals National Bank; National City Bank; National Surety Co.; New York Trust Co.; Chase National Bank; United States Steel Co.

MONTROSE STREET CAR IN COLLISION

Delayed ten minutes by a Salt Lake freight train this morning the outbound car of the Glendale and Montrose carline collided with the inbound car of the same line at Verdugo Spur and Glendale avenue. John L. Bolen was slightly bruised and broke his glasses. No one else was injured, according to officials of the company.

The Verdugo Spur is the point where the in and out bound cars meet. Under normal conditions the outbound car has the right of way over the inbound car over the track this right of way is forfeited after five minutes. The inbound car had just started over the spur when the collision occurred. Mortimer Joe Hingston was in charge of the inbound car and Mortimer M. L. Fair was operating the outbound.

PERDUE GRADUATES REPRESENT CITY

Glendale was represented at the Southern California Perdue University Alumni Association meeting held Tuesday evening by Mr. and Mrs. E. E. East of this city, in Los Angeles. About 50 were present and the after-dinner speakers were Prof. Stadler of the University of Southern California, head of the Chemistry department, who gave an interesting talk on the work of chemists in investigating oil products; and Mr. East who gave an account, illustrated with stereoscopic views, of a trip to the San Juan basin where Utah, Colorado, Arizona and New Mexico join. It is a district little known and now occupied by Indians but rich in ruins of old pueblos.

This Is the Near East Relief Bundle Day

This is the appeal of Near East Relief workers:
It hangs on a hook in your closet.

Or hidden away in the attic. Or in an old, unused trunk, somewhere about the house.

You call it, perhaps, your "spare suit"—a coat you have outworn, that is no longer in style. You call it that because possibly you do not understand.

When you realize that over in Armenia, little, helpless children and tottering old men and women are desperately covering their emaciated bodies with strips of rags and burlap bags, you cannot help but feel that these extra clothes of yours—clothes you do not now need and may never wear again—are "skeletons in your closet."

Your conscience will help you to find them.

Then—bundle them out, and take them to the nearest school yard in your neighborhood, whence they will be shipped to the stricken Near East.

Gifts with which to purchase California foodstuffs for early forwarding to the area are being received by E. E. Osgood, treasurer N. E. R., First National Bank of Glendale.

For information call Rev. R. W. Mottern, 211 North Adams street, phone Glendale 1513-W.

REALTY BOARD CONSIDERS CITY BUS

C. D. Gulick of Transportation Department Explains Project

The proposed auto bus line between Glendale and Los Angeles, was the subject of considerable discussion at the meeting of the Glendale Realty Board, held in the chambers of commerce auditorium yesterday noon. C. D. Gulick was present and told the members of the board the why and how of the bus proposition. He said in part: "I am strongly of the impression that the realty should be the most active men in Glendale in advertising this city. I was first attracted to Glendale after inquiry revealed the fact that a person could go to or from Los Angeles in 15 or 20 minutes by automobile. In inquiring about the street car fares I found that I could commute cheaply, in the event that it was desired that I maintain an office in Los Angeles. On the fact of the fares being low we came here."

"Shortly after locating the fares between this city and Los Angeles were increased. This, as it was to many other residents in Glendale, was quite a shock to me. The present fares are too high to commute daily, and I believe that many have found it so."

"There are many who wonder how I came to become connected with the city. It was this way: Shortly after the raising of the Pacific Electric rates I went to the city council with the proposition of establishing the bus line between Glendale and Los Angeles. The council decided to engage me to take the lead in this matter and to instruct that body so far as I was able, the idea of the council being to find some relief for this high fare proposition."

"We went to Los Angeles, where we have been carried along for one reason or another. On excuse after another has been made to postpone definite action. The corporation has been asked to contribute to the fund."

EAST GLENDALE HOLDS MEETING

A meeting of the East Glendale Improvement association was held at noon today at the White Inn, where the proposition of circulating petitions and doing other work to secure the immediate improvement of Glendale avenue, were discussed.

It is the plan of the association to pave Glendale avenue from curb to curb with permanent paving and make the street one of the principal thoroughfares of the city. This proposed paving program would extend from San Fernando road to Lexington drive, where the paving ends at present. By the installation of this work Glendale avenue would be one of the best paved streets in the city.

Wilson

The regular open forum meeting of the Thursday Afternoon club was held Wednesday afternoon in the branch library building with the president, Mrs. E. V. Bacon, in charge. A short business session was held in which matters of interest to the members were discussed.

Dr. Jessie Russell opened the forum meeting, and in doing so, stated that some of the most important questions now before the Glendale public would be discussed. These included the motor bus question, the new bridge question and the problem of lighting.

C. D. Gulick, manager of transportation for the city of Glendale, was the first speaker introduced by Dr. Russell. Mr. Gulick was formerly manager of one of the largest motor bus organizations in the state, and he comes to the people of Glendale with seven or eight years' experience in this line of work. He and his wife expect to make Glendale their home, and his coming was kept rather quiet because he came to look into transportation conditions.

Mr. Gulick explained what he considered the best method of securing motor bus transportation, and that was, to investigate all conditions thoroughly, taking into consideration the cost of op-

COMMANDERY IS DRILLING FOR EASTER

Knights Been Instructed to Be at Asylum
Sunday Morning

Members of Glendale Commandery are drilling for their annual Easter service, which takes place at the First Methodist church Sunday, April 16, at 11 a. m.

Knights have been instructed to be at the asylum that morning at 10:30 in uniform, that lines may be formed and the march to the church completed by 11 o'clock. Attendance is required and it is expected that every knight will be in line. Resident Sir Knights whose membership is elsewhere, are invited to join in the Commandery service.

A marching drill conducted by Sir Eminent Clem Moore, will be held next Monday night and every member is expected to be out for practice.

JINGLING JAZZ OF THE NEWS

By Bert Marple

The kids of town are on their toes, the circus will be here tomorrow, with its lemonade and fun; and checks await the soldiers who are members of the guards—Unc. Sammie's pay for shouldering a gun.

The boosters of Tujunga say they'll soon annex this place. They have some mammoth dreams, those country folks. The women of the U. S. A. are best at making gowns. This surely is the richest of the jokes.

The bundle day was "some" success—a car of clothes was given; Theodora at the Glendale sure is great.

The team of the Commandery will drill on Easter morn'g. The Shrine club's smokers smoked 'till pretty late.

Friend Smirl and Miss May Stanfield are united for all time; Glendale will soon put on her Easter dress.

And if you want a baby cart, an ice box or a fliv, Just put a lass ad in the Glendale Press.

The Barton Bedtime Stories

WHAT FOLKS WILL BELIEVE

By JOHN BARTON

(Copyright, 1921, by Associated Newspapers)

The red dog didn't know whether to growl or to bark. You know just how you'd feel if some one told you they didn't believe you. Of course he'd made up a lot of his story about the Ark as he went along, to get even with Dr. Muskrat for doing the very same, but it seemed so real by the time he finished telling it he kind of believed it himself.

Yet here was Chips Beaver arguing, "That part about the raven was all right, and the whale—Dr. Muskrat told us about him—and the people, specially Ham's boy, and some about the dogs. But when it comes to birds that can't fly (he meant the ostrich) and beasts who eat the tops of trees (that was the giraffe) or wear humps and live on thorns like you say the camel did—why I—I hate to hurt your feelings, but just can't believe in them."

Here Tommy Peele's old tail-wagger, Watch, who had been quiet all this time, turned to Dr. Muskrat with a knowing grin. "How about you, doctor?" he asked. "How much of it do you believe?"

The wise paddle-paw scratched his nose. "Well," he answered thoughtfully. "I can believe about those Africa beasts most as well as anything else. Seems to me they're too queer for any one to just imagine. But I'll be surer when I've had a day's sleep and a little time to think about them. Hadn't we better be going along?"

This last was to the two dogs. In fact to no time they were all three trotting through the Deep Woods toward Dr. Muskrat's own Pond, leaving the beavers and the Widow Squirrel to figure out exactly what Dr. Muskrat did mean.

"Hm!" sniffed the red dog. "Chips would only believe my make-ups. There is a camel and there is a giraffe. I've seen 'em. In a circus (that's a sort of Noah's Ark on land) one of the times I ran away from home. And a dog I met there told me about them. But he said he rode on a horse's back and jumped through hoops. Do you suppose he was only inventing?"

"Pal," advised the sensible muskrat, "when you hear a good yarn have all the fun out of it you can."

HOWE'S CIRCUS HAS ELEPHANT HEROINE

"Rubber" Saves Her Trainer in Storm Wrecked Tent

When Howe's Great London Circus with Van Amburg's Trained Wild Animals appears at Glendale, on Friday, April 7, there will be a great curiosity to view the monster elephant, "Rubber," said to be one of the largest of her species in captivity, without doubt, with superior intelligence to that of her fellows. While every animal the eye rests upon within the confines of this "Zoological Paradise" seems shrouded in mystery to the casual observer, "Rubber" is associated with events of the most profound interest. It is said that at the annual "round up" or elephant hunt, near Ayuta, which is some forty miles distant from Bangkok, in Siam, this particular elephant had been the goal of every hunter for years, but owing to enormous size and strength success had failed to crown their efforts in capturing her until the spring of 1915, when she was among the 23 captured—this being the entire haul for the season.

Surprisingly active, considering her enormous size, "Rubber" soon developed remarkable intelligence and has frequently amazed those who have been connected with elephants all their lives by her keen sense of responsibility and the manner in which she once saved her keeper, "Red" McKay, from a fatal injury. Elephants are "weather-wise," afraid of lightning and thunder; it is with effort that keepers quiet them. Storms have caused stampedes and unusual care is taken in fastening them by heavy chains to stakes driven six feet in earth. One night, in a middle west city, a terrific storm burst with a blinding flash of lightning, followed by crash after crash of thunder. Terror-stricken, "Rubber" tried to awaken her master, who sleeping heavily, only turned over, when the entire herd tore up their stakes, rushing madly for the open. "Rubber" alone remained by the keeper's side, breaking the fall of a huge center pole, which fell splintering on her huge body, destroying the sight of one of her eyes, but the keeper was saved. When trainers and helpers had quieted the runaway, they found her standing guard over the prostrate man, unimpaired of her own injury and forgetful of the storm. Can we wonder at a keeper having devotion for such an animal? If elephants were awarded medals or honor, "Rubber" should be entitled to one for the truly great.

RIALTO STOCK CO. OFFERS GOOD PROGRAM

"Which One Shall I Marry" Is Special Offering at Tent Theatre

All of the attractiveness of "Everywoman" and "Experience" will be found in the impressive morality play, "Which One Shall I Marry?" the special offering at the tent theatre tonight. The play is one appealing to every young woman and young man, but is not without extreme interest for the elders, and it is to be regretted that every young person in the land cannot witness this production. The small admission fee in force at the tent theatre will continue for "Which One Shall I Marry" and for the remainder of the week, which ends Sunday night. Another Morosco success, "The Brat," will be the attraction.

A man will confess to one bad habit for the purpose of hiding a dozen others.

A Year Ago Today

(From the Glendale Daily Press, for April 6, 1921)
Directors of the Glendale Chamber of Commerce at their luncheon yesterday authorized Secretary James M. Rhoades to take out a membership for the organization in the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Approximately 30 Missourians met last night in the auditorium of the Glendale Union high school to plan for the organization of a Missouri club. The organization is a part of the "back home" movement to promote the sending of big excursions from Los Angeles county to participate in the one hundredth anniversary of Missouri to the Union.

The literary section of the Tuesday Afternoon club was entertained yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. A. M. Williams, curator of that section. The feature of the afternoon was a review by Mrs. E. W. Hayward of "Walpole's 'The Duchess of Wrex'."

A mass meeting has been called for Thursday night at the Intermediate School to hear reports by the committee to investigate and suggest some means of relieving the present congestion in the city schools.

200 HIGH SCHOOLS TO SEND TEAMS

PORTLAND, Ore., April 6.—More than 200 high schools will send track teams to Portland April 15 to take part in Columbia University's 18th annual indoor track meet, to be staged in the school's gymnasium. Practically every high school of note in Oregon, Washington, and Idaho has been invited to send men. Colleges, for the first time in the history of the indoor carnival, will be excluded.

Sometimes the man who knows it all has to be shown.

Police never give a rap for law-abiding citizens.

SWIMMING POOL AT AUTO PARK

GRASS VALLEY, Calif., April 6.—The Memorial Park commissioners here have just completed an exhaustive research of records covering the cost of auto and municipal parks in California for the past year, and as a result tourists visiting here this summer will have in conjunction with their auto park privileges of access to a swimming pool, playground, community house, and athletic fields, all on the same piece of ground.
Grass Valley has had no park heretofore, and the "combination" feature of Memorial Park is an experiment in conservation. Local people availing themselves of the park amusements and mingling with the visitors will, the commissioners believe, serve as a "friendly stimulant" to increased interest and more local buying by the campers, it is believed.
It's hard to please yourself when somebody else has the start.

THEODORA, GREAT
SARDOU DRAMA,
AT GLENDALE

$3,000,000 Art Spectacle
Here for Two Days
More

The wonderful spectacle of "Theodora," Victorien Saridou's finest offering to the world, was witnessed last night at the Glendale theatre by a very good house, considering the various attractions that are going on in Glendale. But nothing but a capacity house could be worthy of this show, for it is without doubt the finest costume drama that has been seen in Glendale for months. It is a simply gorgeous production. From beginning to end it is a source of wonderment. The assertion is made that this firm cost $3,000,000 to produce, and no one who sits through this master photoplay will for a moment doubt this assertion.

For the filming of this wonder-

000 meters in extent, just outside of Rome, was secured. This was found necessary because no four studies were large enough to put

On the wonderful "big scenes" in this gigantic play. It is claimed that the palaces and amphitheaters were constructed of genuine stone and marble.

"Architecturally, "Theodora" is a marvel of marvels. It is as if all the glories of ancient Byzantium had been transplanted unvarnished to the twentieth century. The visions which the screen presents of palaces, pavilions, gardens, board stairways mounting to dizzy heights, frowning battlements, grim prisons, no-

But most remarkable of all is the replica of the ancient hippodrome. It is here that the thousands assembled for the royal games heap their wrath upon the tyrant Justinian. It is here, also, that Theodora insanely orders the lions set loose among the people. The tale briefly: Theodora, Justinian's empress, went out nights and carried on affairs with her lovers at Constantinople. She is trapped and accused. The 25,000 or one million—it matters not—people are gathered at the great circus, which is the greatest "spectacle" built for the purpose of making people cry out against their empress and scramble from their seats into the circus ring. The "punch" of the picture, to use theatrical phrasology, is at this minute, where Theodora tells a servant to loose 400 Nubian lions on the crowd. What happens cannot be described in prose. How it was photographed nobody seems to know. And we shouldn't care. What concerns us is that it is the most thrilling spectacle ever filmed, a magnificent achievement which it is a pleasure to recommend to the attention of every one.

Truths in Epigram

Some people are so fond of ill-luck that they run halfway to meet it.—Jerrold (1803-1857).

If eyes were made for seeing, Then Beauty is its own excuse for being.—Emerson (1803-1882).

CRIPPLE AND SCUTTLE

Representative Rogers, speaking against the policy of "cripple and scuttle" that little navy men are seeking to establish, said much of interest. He said enough to make the little men in question ashamed, if they are capable of so worthy an emotion. His address was so full of facts that it made the situation clear to all who read the spirited remarks.

The little navy men seek to betray the interests of their country. It is proper to say in their defense that they do not seem to know enough to know what they are seeking. They appear not to fathom the depths of the folly they advocate, not understanding it to be folly at all.

A ratio of naval strength was established for the United States, Great Britain and Japan. There was the clear understanding that each would keep up to the allotted status. The plan allowed this country eighteen capital ships. The advocates of naval crippling want this number cut to twelve. This, with reduction of naval personnel, would destroy the ratio admitted to be fair and necessary. The ratio was on the scale of 5-5-3. Should the congressional assault on the navy succeed, the United States will sink from an equality with Great Britain to a rating below that of Japan. That this would not only be dangerous but would humiliate this country in the eyes of the world, there is no question.

The United States was in a position where with comparative ease it might have been the first naval power. Voluntarily it made the suggestion of maintaining a force no greater than that of England. Now come some of its own statesmen, trying to reduce this effectiveness to less than Japan's.

The manner in which they want ships and equipment lessened indicates a desire to create such environment for the few ships and small equipment remaining, that the United States virtually would be without sea defense, and even without a nucleus, from which in time of sudden stress, a navy might be started. A navy needs men, officers, ships and morale. The little navy fellows would not leave a single one of these essential elements intact.

CABIN AND STEERAGE

Prof. Edward M. Steiner of Grinnell college is lecturing in California in the interests of university extension. The cause of education generally, is to be congratulated on the circumstance. Prof. Steiner is regarded throughout the country as an authority on sociology. He not only has a message, but he delivers it in the terms of lucidity and conviction.

One of his lectures is entitled "The Old Cabin and the New Steerage." It resolves itself into a plea for the humbler social element, the immigrant who comes to this land of liberty. In this the professor tells of his experience in crossing the ocean. He had traveled by steerage, and also by cabin. He had made a study of the people using both accommodations. He was not thrilled by any sense of justice in finding that the fine quarters aboard ship were devoted to the comfort of a few; that the few had luxuries of environment, of the table, more space than they could use, more forms of amusement than they could appreciate. For he knew that deep down in the hold, where air is foul and food abominable, there were hundreds condemned to discomfort all the way over.

He termed the cabin "old" because its ideas do not change. It remains certain of superiority, of security, of the right that it should have all it wants. The steerage he called "new." It has fresh beliefs. One of the beliefs is in the possibility of change. He called attention to the fact that those who experience luxury, dine richly, are gowned extravagantly, and who blaze with jewels, could not have had these endowments but for the type that is cooped in the steerage.

The ocean voyage he conceives to be an illustration of the voyage of life. The cabin and the steerage, characterizing and separate from each other classes that really should have a common purpose and a common understanding.

BLACKMAIL COMMON

The statement of a famous detective that blackmail is a common crime, doubtless will be surprising to most people. It is known to prevail amongst certain alien classes. With them it is a bald scheme of robbery. It is sought to be made effective, not through threats of exposure, but of death. The victim yields, not that there is something in his career that he prefers to keep concealed, but that he wishes to live.

According to the detective, blackmailers make not less than $3,000,000 a year, exacting most of this from rich men. The winnings are greater than the aggregate winnings of other types of thieves. They outdo the combined burglars, pickpockets and bandits in the amount of their booty. If this is true, it is a remarkable revelation of human depravity.

Blackmail ordinarily is regarded as the meanest type of crime. It is base and cowardly to a degree not to be reached save by creatures of the lowest class. Often the plotters find out something concerning an early and perhaps forgotten lapse of a man or woman, who thereafter had attained an enviable reputation. It is the threat to tell the truth and, to blast the reputation that is used as a weapon of terror. The victim fails to realize that a brave stand against the ghoul might over-awe them. To defy them would be a method of holding, rather than of forfeiting, respect.

Some years ago there was a one-act play, the villain of which was a blackmailer, the victim a woman. A friend of the woman comes from the west and finds her in great distress. She confides the full set of facts to him, and he arranges a meeting with the blackmailer. Finding how vile the plot is, how heartless the plotter, he kills the fellow on the spot, neatly perfects arrangements to show that the end was suicide, and the curtain falls. It was a very popular little play.

DWELLING HOUSES CONDEMNED

A distinguished doctor who practices his profession mostly through the medium of the press, says that a dwelling house should not be permitted to stand more than fifty years. As to many of the houses now being hastily constructed throughout the land, he has small reason to fret. They are not designed to last for so long a period.

Of course the doctor is wrong. With a house properly built, and lived in by clean and decent people, there could be no occasion for the destruction he advocates. Can it be that he speaks in the interest of the builders' trust? He might as well declare that the globe should be cleaned up at regular intervals, purged of its vapors and its rheums, by being neatly and completely effaced.

Many pre-revolutionary houses are standing in Pennsylvania and other Atlantic states. They are as solid as they were the day the builders drove the last nail. They are as clean and healthful as houses erected a century later. Naturally, most of them have been equipped with sanitary appliances such as were unknown to the time of Washington. So equipped, they are as easy to keep in proper condition as structures erected at the present day. They have been occupied from generation to generation. And medical board ordering them to be obliterated would be likely to cause inquiry into the sanity of its members.

When a builder puts into a house the best material, the best methods, and his best efforts, he is not building for fifty years. He is building for an indefinite span. Such persons as desire temporary quarters instead of a home to pass down to their children and grand-children, would save money and needless effort by living in tents, or a shelter of boughs.

PERSECUTING A NURSE

A dispatch printed in the New York Times tells of an industrial nurse who is being persecuted for the faithfulness and skill with which she performed her work. This nurse had treated the injured finger of a millworker. She restored the member to use, fingers. No doctor could have done better. Now the police of Fall River have been asked by the state board of registration in medicine to arrest the woman. It is desired to make an example of her. Wantonly and wickedly she usurped the place of the doctor. Knowing by her experience, and by her awareness of her own skill, that there was no necessity for treatment other than she was competent to give, she saved the patient the trouble of paying a doctor.

That was a crime. The statutes of the enlightened state of Massachusetts so declare. What right has anybody to cure anybody in the absence of diploma, license and the consent of the medical fraternity? None.

The pews does not name the punishment to which the nurse is to be subjected. May it not be honored the commonwealth will be content with some mild less severe than hanging. Maybe were the ex-patient to take a hammer and smash his finger anew, letting doctors attend to the fresh hurt, the edge would be taken from their wrath, and the penalty softened.

Whether a Massachusetts woman may give her child castor oil without the specific order of the doctor; take a splinter from the heel of her barefoot boy in the absence of the family physician, or even rub soda on her own burns acquired at the kitchen range, without first procuring a permit, are questions concerning which the public still is left in the dark.

Wise is the employer who knows how to do the things he hires others to do.

The warmth of a woman's love is only exceeded by her temper.

IF ONLY

By DR. FRANK CRANE

There is a song by Alexis Tolstoy that runs as follows:

"If the waters of the Volga would run backwards, If one could begin life again,

If all the women were young widows,

If one did not put water in wine, If one could drink till he was satisfied,

If injustice would go to the devil, If the hungry were all fed,

If there were justice in this world,

If the waters of the Volga would run backwards,

If one could begin life again."

Which we might continue as follows:

If all the insane were only shut up in asylums,

If all the egotists could be banished to an island by themselves,

If all the beautiful women were good,

If only politicians would not run for office but sit still and let the office seek them,

If in the question of disarmament the nations would cease saying to each other: "After you, my dear Alphonse!"

If critics only wrote of what they liked,

If happiness could only be bought for money,

If only corns grew on the knees where you could get at them,

If only youth would take experience for nothing from age instead of buying it at such a price,

If only partisanship would confine itself to baseball and let government alone,

If only crime could be cured by punishment,

If only the sun shone at night when we need it,

If only people had warm hearts and cool heads instead of hot heads and cold hearts,

If only we could add to the Golden Rule "Do unto others as ye would they should do unto you" this necessary completion: "But do it first,"

If we could only live a hundred years from now and see how it is all going to come out.

THE LISTENING POST

Once there was an angry man. As the fairy stories used to begin. Who had been ill-treated by someone he had thought to be a friend. Or a business competitor or somebody or other. It doesn't matter.

And the angry man grew angrier the more he thought of it. He saw red as the saying is. Fire flashed from his eyes. And his mind was full of forked lightnings.

Perhaps you have been that way yourself. Most of us have at some time or another. We feel aggrieved. And the more we think of it the more aggrieved we feel.

Which is the danger of morbid reflection. It emphasizes an unwholesome state of mind.

If the room is full of foul air we open the windows.

Otherwise we shall have headache and lassitude and heaviness.

So when the mind gets full of bad air we need to open the windows.

Let fresh air in.

The way to drive away evil thoughts is to let wholesome thoughts in.

The angry man was a pretty wise man after all. He knew the dangers of anger.

And that it was unwise and unwholesome to give way to passion.

But he was deeply hurt. And he resolved to get it out of his system.

The more he thought the angrier he got. The more fiercely he hated the man he was angry at.

And the more he felt the need of relieving his feelings.

By telling the man what he thought of him. And he resolved to write him a letter.

Telling him just how low, mean, hateful, dishonorable, despicable, deceitful, damnable and dismal a wretch he was.

The man deserved it.

And the angry man would set it all down. Kill two birds with one stone.

Blast the other man with lightning and get the anger out of his own system.

After he had read it he sent for the stenographer again.

"Shall I mail it?" she asked after he had signed it with a great flourish and a driving of the pen nearly through the paper.

"No, indeed," he replied. "Take it out into the other room and tear it up and put it in the waste basket. I did not intend to send it. I wanted to set it out of my system. But now—how that would have blistered old Skeezicks if he had gotten it!"

And he went out and played a round of golf. Returned with fresh air in his lungs and his mind freed of hatred and anger.

And no harm done.

SONGS OF THE POETS

The Brown Thrush—Lucy Larcom (1824-1893)

There a merry brown thrush sitting up in the tree, He's singing to me! He's singing to me! And what does he say, little girl, little boy? "Oh, the world's running over with joy! Don't you hear? Don't you see? Hush! Look! In my tree I'm as happy as happy can be!"

And the brown thrush keeps singing, "A nest do you see, And five eggs, hid by me in the juniper-tree? Don't meddle! Don't touch, little girl, little boy."

Or the world will lose some of its joy! Now I'm glad! Now I'm free! And I always shall be, If you never bring sorrow to me."

So the merry brown thrush sings always in the tree, To you and to me, to you and to me; And he sings all the day, little girl, little boy, "Oh, the world's running over with joy! But it won't be, Don't you know? Don't you see? Unless we're as good as can be."

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

ECONOMIC EDUCATION

[New York Commercial]

Never before has there been such need for sane, calm thinking as there is now. Heretofore, our economic policies have been thought out by a few leaders; or else have taken care of themselves. But with the upheaval in world conditions the general public has been brought in direct contact with economic problems and is studying them now with the greatest possible interest. Unfortunately there are not enough leaders of thought in close enough contact with the public to formulate these theories along the lines of sound doctrine, but, as ever, there are at hand those who seize upon the opportunity to preach false doctrines for their own profit. The demagogue may be a crossroads politician, the mayor of a big city or the editor of a string of sensational newspapers, but wherever he departs from basic natural law he is laying up for himself, for those he represents and for the nation at large a reserve of misfortune that will have to be reckoned with in due course.

There is throughout the country a wave of loose thinking on important projects that is finding expression in congress, with no prospect of improvement in the congress to be elected this fall. It is a tendency rather away from conservative thought and which, if care is not taken, may find an outlet in a wave of radicalism such as marked the free silver craze of the early nineties. Let those who hold responsible positions anywhere, whether as editors, college professors, preachers, or wherever they may be placed so as to influence public thought, realize the responsibility which is theirs, of holding to sound doctrine.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

The assumption of certain classes that labor has no right to organize, and that it must be forced to cease to organize, often reaches the pitch of actual insolence.

This is particularly the case because the opposition comes from forces that are themselves highly organized. These forces would regard as preposterous the assertion that, in being so organized, they were violating any human right. Nevertheless, in many instances they have sought to violate human rights.

In the great industrial game, why should not both sides play fair?

At present there is a strike of coal miners. Attempts to place the blame all on the miners, especially on the circumstance that the miners are organized, are many and futile. The facts undeniably are that a solemn agreement was entered into by the two equations directly at interest. The operators, and not the miners, broke the agreement.

Crookedness is suspected in the government bureau of engraving. By reason of this a number of employees have been dismissed by the President. Promptly appears the assertion that matters went wrong in the bureau because it had been conducted on the closed shop principle. That this had nothing whatever to do with the matter is plain.

Doubtless both in and out of unions there are individuals not governed by a fine code of morals. These individuals in either case are responsible for their own conduct.

Lloyd George has been given a vote of confidence by the house of commons. It is not a surprising thing that the statesmen of England should have confidence in the leader whom the world honors.

The question at direct issue was in relation to the Genoa conference. England is willing to participate in that affair, and probably the premier has good reasons for favoring such a course.

This country saw fit to hold aloof from Genoa, a decision for which also the reason is sound.

Agricultural students are calling for the oldest horse. They want to experiment on the animal, benignly for the purpose of making him kick up his heels in clothed abandon.

To find the oldest horse is going to be a difficult task. The owner of such a creature will be certain to desire to camouflage the real age.

Harry Leon Wilson, who issued a challenge to fisticuffs, went forth boldly and got licked, indicates that he has not had enough.

Wilson is very funny with pen in hand. He ought to know that the pen is more powerful than the stuffed glove.

Women are being arrested in Chicago for gambling. When a group of them set to playing dollar limit poker, the police are likely to grab table stakes and players. There is not the slightest ground for objecting. Poker is generally considered a man's game. When women take it up, it is fair that they take also the chances that go with it.

Some more light is thrown upon the moral status of speeders by the killing of a man in Los Angeles on one of the streets much used by automobilists. The victim evidently had had the temerity to try to cross the street. The hour was after midnight. Traffic had thinned to such point that the remaining drivers conceived it their right to go the limit. They went. They so go habitually.

One set of joyriders struck the pedestrian down, but did not pause. In order to disturb the serenity of joyriders, tragedy must snatch away some member of their party and disable their machine. These combined disasters have been known to dampen the spirits temporarily.

Not only was the victim of these thoughtless thugs left on the pavement, but other machines coming merely along ran over his body with a bump that must have been annoying to riders. The man himself probably was unaware of what was happening.

At last somebody bethought himself to tell the police that a man was dead in the street, with machines rolling over him occasionally.

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGRIM

Looking backward I can get a first rate, highly energized giggle out of the superiority I felt in the year 1912. Not that I was so terribly superior to the world at large. I knocked my forehead on the floor every time I caught sight of a few dozen men and women. But here and there I saw a chance to be superior, and believe me, I was! Hart Fetzlow furnished one of my best chances. I used to go by him wearing an aura of superiority that was almost felt, it was so thick and heavy.

"The poor sap," I said to myself.

Come to think of it, we weren't calling 'em saps in those days, and so I probably used the current synonym. But no matter. You know what I mean. Hart Fetzlow was slick, slender, smooth-haired, bright-eyed, humorous, entertaining and obliging. He could always keep a company amused. He was invited to a lot of houses to which I was not invited, mostly because the folks began to brighten up when they saw Hart whereas they always felt they had to walk slowly past me and remark upon the extraordinary naturalness of my expression. I made about four times the money Hart made. I doubt, in fact, whether Hart had any settled income. He worked sometimes and borrowed sometimes, and now and then one of the rich men he had betrayed into a grin would toss him a piece of change by way of an alleged tip on the market. I frankly despised Hart.

"A little twerfer parasite," I used to call him to myself.

Now, Hart is a business man. He is rich. He is respected. He still makes people laugh at the houses which he is invited, but he also makes the Board of Trade and chamber of commerce and national associations and large bodies of over-livered bankers laugh. After he has made them laugh he straightens them up with a bit of hard, common sense—a sort of a stiff jab to the chin effect—which compels them to think heavily while waiting for the next laugh.

I've reformed my ideas about social parasites. Some of them, of course, always will be the misletoe of the social forest. But the very qualities that make them popular—the thing we call magnetism for lack of a better name—would make them successful if and when they learn how to apply it.

The funny thing is that Hart is as friendly as a pup with me. I'm wondering if I used to laugh so heartily that I concealed my contempt for him—or, was I a rotten little hypocrite, just as I thought he was a contemptible little sap?

DO YOU KNOW THAT?

PASADENA CLUB HONORS P. T. A. EXECUTIVES

Mrs. Higgins and Local Officers Are Guests at Banquet

Now that it is over and opportunity is given to survey the event, officials of the Glendale federation of Parent-Teacher associations feel well satisfied with their part in the conference of presidents of the district federation of Parent-Teacher associations, held in this city Tuesday, which proved such a successful affair. With the consciousness that the Glendale organization had acquitted itself creditably, Mrs. John Robert White, president of the local federation, and Mrs. C. E. Hutchinson, a state chairman, who represented Glendale at a banquet given by the federation of Parent-Teacher associations of Pasadena Wednesday noon at the Shakespear club, were in a mood to thoroughly enjoy it.

Covers were laid for about 350 and in many respects it was similar to the luncheon given by the Glendale organization on Tuesday. The club rooms, where the function took place, were beautifully decorated, particularly the auditorium stage, with mustard bloom, poppies, daffodils and purple and white iris.

As in Glendale, the initial speech of welcome was made by the mayor, and was followed by greetings from Mrs. David O. Mears, national first vice president; the superintendent of schools; Mrs. Rowe, past president of the Pasadena federation of Parent-Teacher associations, and also a state chairman; Mrs. E. L. Hamilton, of Pasadena, a national vice president. There were musical numbers by Miss Wood, who sang "Song of Spring" and Cadman's "Sky Blue Water," and selections by a trio of piano, flute and violin players.

In her address of response, Mrs. Higgins used the words of the word "home" as her keynote. It, she said, stands for home, for habits which determine character; O, stands for obedience and for ownership; M for manners, which are the outgrowth of good morals; and E, for education.

"We are moving three times as fast as we did years ago," she declared, "and so have to move three times as fast to keep up with our children. We need higher education for parents in order to give children their right dues."

MISS NETHERBY IS HONOR

GUEST AT CLUB MEETING

The members of the Wednesday club were delightfully entertained Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Katherine Clotworthy, 532 West avenue. Miss Netherby was a special guest of the club. Golden California poppies centered the attractively arranged luncheon table and after the delicious luncheon had been served by the hostess, a pleasant afternoon was spent in sewing and social conversation. Miss Netherby told fortunes in a numerical manner which caused much merriment. The guests were Mrs. Frank Hester, Mrs. Alfred Muhlenberg, Mrs. William A. Gibson, Mrs. William A. Nash, Mrs. Julia Perkins, Mrs. Charles Glover, Mrs. Charles Freshman, Mrs. H. A. Reed of Long Beach, Miss Clara Ringert, Miss Netherby, Mrs. George E. Roach, Mrs. J. F. Hearnshaw, Mrs. Charles Sanders and Mrs. Katherine Clotworthy.

PRESENTED DAILY BY KATE BREW VAUGHN

SOUR CREAM PIE

One cup of sour cream, one-half cup seeded raisins (chopped fine), one cup sugar, one-half teaspoon cinnamon, one-quarter teaspoon cloves, yolks of three eggs. Whip cream, add yolks beaten light with the sugar, add spices and raisins. Bake in a crust. Beat whites of eggs stiff and use for meringue.

MACAROONS

Ten ounces of almonds, blanched and ground into a paste, or as much of the almond paste. Beat eight egg whites and ten ounces of powdered sugar. Beat the eggs until frothy but not stiff, and add gradually the almond paste and sugar until a paste stiff enough to drop is obtained. Add a few drops at a time with vanilla or orange or lemon. Put through a forcing bag on heavy white paper, slightly oiled, making rounds about one and a half inches wide and one-fourth inch thick. Dust with confectioner's sugar and bake in a very moderate oven for about half hour. As soon as they are slightly brown, take the cakes out and turn the cakes face downward and brush the paper with a little water at the back of each to detach them. Put them on a pastry rack to cool until quite dry and crisp.

CITRON TARTS

Yolks of six eggs, one-half pound butter, three-fourths pound sugar, one teaspoon of ground orange peel. Line tart tins with rich pie crust. Put a spoonful of the mixture in each and bake.

READING CIRCLE

POSTPONES MEETING

At the meeting of the Mutual Benefit Reading circle, held Wednesday at the city library, announcement was made that no meeting would be held next week because of the Easter vacation. About fifty members were in attendance.

Mrs. Evans read an article by Dorothy Canfield Fisher, entitled "Aren't you glad you are not your grandmother?" It concerned a series of letters written by a young mother of two generations ago and furnished some amusement and not a little pathos in its comparison of old time methods of child training with those in vogue today. During the afternoon four chapters were read from the book, "Mother Love in Action," by Prudence Bradish. The subjects discussed were playmates, training and breaking wills, educational materials right at hand, and habits. This book, written by a mother who was formerly a kindergarten which stimulates much discussion among members.

April 26 will be "Circle Baby Day." At this time a celebration will be held in honor of the little ones born to circle mothers since its organization. Six new little tots will be welcomed this year.

The review for week after next will be an article entitled, "It Is Up to You," which will be read by Mrs. Pendleton.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY

HOLDS MEETING

The missionary society of Central Christian church met Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Charles M. Cronkrite, 627 East Windsor road. There were about 40 members present.

They held their regular business meeting, this being followed by a delightful program. Miss Lela Garton, a missionary to India, gave an interesting talk concerning her work there. The next number was a vocal solo by Mrs. Smith, followed by short talks from each member of the Philippines.

At the close of the program the hostess served hot coffee and cake, carrying out the color scheme of purple and white, the class colors. Purple lupin and white iris were used about the home.

INTERDENOMINATIONAL

BIBLE STUDY CLASS

The Interdenominational Bible Study class met Wednesday morning at the home of Mrs. J. Rhea Baker, 381 North Maryland avenue, with about 35 women present. Mrs. Craig of Chicago, who is visiting in Los Angeles, was a guest at yesterday's meeting. The subject for the day was "The Passover," taken from the 12th chapter of Exodus. A report of the business meeting that was held last Thursday at the home of Mrs. Culver, was read. Plans were made for an all-day meeting of prayer and bible study for next Wednesday to be held at Mrs. Baker's home.

DR. JESSIE RUSSELL

GIVES LUNCHEON

Dr. Jessie A. Russell of this city entertained with a luncheon at 4:30 Tuesday afternoon at the Glen Inn in honor of Mrs. Milton P. Higgins of Worcester, Mass., and Mrs. David O. Mears of Boston, president and first vice president respectively of the National Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher associations. Covers were laid for 18 guests from Glendale, Whittier, Los Angeles, Pasadena, South Pasadena and elsewhere, all ladies of prominence in P. T. A. district and state organizations, of which the doctor is a past president as well as a national chairman.

WENONA CAMPFIRE GIRLS

HOLD COUNCIL MEETING

Wenona Campfire Girls, under their guardian, Mrs. Robert Carpenter and assistant guardian, Mrs. Whytock, had a council meeting Wednesday in the parlors of the First Methodist church. The members present were Gertrude Blakeley, Marian Dewey, Virginia Glass, Margery Graham, Ruth Jones, Margery Phillips, Janet Webb, Allison Whitaker, Lois Wardall and Jeanette Zitelen.

This organization meets weekly on Tuesday afternoons. One of the matters discussed at the council was an entertainment the girls are to give in the near future for their mothers.

MRS. LYONS GIVES

DELICIOUS LUNCHEON

Mrs. J. G. Lyons of 359 Riverside drive entertained Wednesday at a very delicious luncheon. A color scheme of pink predominated throughout the house, the luncheon table being centered with a basket of pink sweet peas and ferns. The favor baskets and place cards were also in pink.

At the close of the luncheon a musical and social afternoon was enjoyed in which the ladies sewed. Plates were set for Mrs. T. I. Gifford, Miss Florence Gifford of Pasadena, Mrs. E. E. Oliver, Mrs. E. F. Patterson, Mrs. D. S. English, Mrs. M. C. Patterson and the hostess, Mrs. G. J. Lyons.

MRS. PUTMAN HOSTESS TO

WEDNESDAY BRIDGE CLUB

Mrs. Claud Putman of 424 North Glendale avenue was hostess to the Wednesday Luncheon Bridge club and provided a beautiful floral setting for the party, using jonquils and blue iris in the decoration of her charmingly appointed table and the living room in which the play was sat. The members present were, Mesdames Frank George, George Robinson, Charles Carroll, Wallace Walker, E. E. East, Robert Pease, the hostess and Miss Elma Mess. High score was made by Mrs. Walker, the prize being a lovely china condiment set and tray.

DORAN P. T. A. ADDS DELEGATE

Enough New Enrollment Obtained to Increase Representation

A good attendance featured the interesting meeting of the Doran Street Parent-Teacher association held Wednesday at the school. A sufficient number of new members were enrolled to entitle the association to an additional delegate to the district convention.

Mrs. A. H. Brown, the president, presided at the business session which was followed by a program, which included an address by A. McCurdy of Los Angeles, on "Why We Send Our Children to School," and a talk on Near East Relief by Mrs. Hahn, a song by girls of the sixth grade, "The Modest Violet," and a recitation by Vera Lockwood.

The association voted to appropriate from its treasury $5 per month for the support of an Armenian orphan, and a nominating committee to select officers for next year, was appointed, composed of Mrs. A. H. Brown, Mrs. Clark Johnson, Mrs. Speck, Miss Van, Miss Lois Hatch.

Delegates elected to represent the association at the district convention to be held in Los Angeles April 27 and 28, were Mrs. Maranville, Mrs. Harry V. Ellis, Mrs. P. A. Olson, Mrs. Speck and the president, Mrs. A. H. Brown.

THURSDAY CLUB HOLDS FORUM

eration, fare per capita, etc. Then, if the people want it, but it is to a vote and let them decide in that manner. He stated that out of 555 cities in the United States, Los Angeles is one out of 21 of these cities that have a 5-cent carfare rates. Most of the others have a 6, 7 and 8 cent rate, or a 5-cent rate with 1 cent for a transfer.

L. H. Wilson, secretary of the San Fernando Boulevard association, was then introduced, and he also briefly discussed the motor bus problem. Not only does Glendale need motor bus transportation, but needs, according to Mr. Wilson, four new bridges to bring Glendale closer to Los Angeles, and for the convenience of both the cities of Los Angeles and Glendale. He said we also need lights and new streets.

It was the belief of Mr. Wilson that San Fernando boulevard is one of the leading highways of the United States. It has, he said, one of the best futures of any of any street in Glendale, but has been handicapped for lack of lights. The San Fernando Boulevard association has sent in a petition to the city council for lights extending from Los Feliz road to Pacific avenue on San Fernando road, and this was granted. They will be three-light standards and will also be placed on Los Feliz road from Glendale avenue to the city limits. Most of the streets in Glendale need to be paved, and, according to Mr. Wilson, this matter will be taken care of by the city council as soon as possible, which merely goes to show what the right kind of cooperation with the council will do for our city. It was stated by the council that it was glad to see the south end of the town so alive to the needs of the entire city.

Mr. Wilson said he believed that in the near future Glendale will have a bridge connecting Park avenue with Griffith park. There are several other places where bridges are badly needed and in time they will be granted. Cooperation is the keynote of progress today, he said.

After these splendid talks, open discussion was the order, and many interesting questions were asked. The ladies then served refreshments and the meeting closed, every member feeling that many questions had been answered for them.

LABEL LEAGUE HOLDS MEETING

Local No. 400 of the Women's Union Label league met at an all-day meeting Wednesday at the home of Mrs. J. D. Hall, 134 North Belmont street. The day was spent in sewing for the local Red Cross chapter, and at noon luncheon was served.

Those who took part in this good work were Mrs. O. G. Thompson, Mrs. Hamilton, Mrs. York, Mrs. Carlson, Mrs. B. Thorp, Mrs. Murdoch, Mrs. Van Hook from La Crescenta, Mrs. W. M. Brown, Mrs. McInnis, Mrs. W. A. Hall of Glendale Heights, Mrs. Emerson, Mrs. D. Hall, Mrs. Blackler and Mrs. J. D. Hall.

MIDCALT-HEISTER NUPTIALS HELD

Owing to the recent death of her sister, Miss Clara Midcalt, the wedding of Miss Alice Midcalt, and Ralph Emerson Heister was very quietly solemnized at Pasadena, by the Rev. B. D. Snudden, Tuesday, April 4. Holman P. Midcalt, and Miss Cleo Helen Redd, brother and niece of the bride, were the only attendants. Mr. and Mrs. Heister will reside in Los Angeles.

THURSDAY CLUB SALE

The Thursday Afternoon club will hold a cooked food sale Sunday, beginning at 10 o'clock, in the branch library hall, corner of Los Feliz road and Brand boulevard. All kinds of cooked food will be sold.

PHILADELPHIA CLASS

Active Young Folks to Entertain at Methodist Church

The Philaetha class of the First Methodist church, of which Mrs. Carl Seitter is teacher, will give a splendid program Friday night in the church auditorium. This is one of the "peppiest" classes in the church and all may be certain that the program will be interesting and lively. It will include numbers as follows:

1. "Stars Brightly Shining," by Glee club.
2. Saxophone duet, Miss Agnes Brown and Miss Helen Ingledue.
3. Negro lecture, "Apples," by Miss Vera Stotzhauer.
4. (a) "Beauteous Night, Oh Night of Love," (b) "Cake Shop Romance," Glee club.
5. Violin solos (a) "The Legend" (Weinlaush); (b) "Serenade" (Drda), Miss Lois Murphy.
6. Vocal solos (a) "It's Only a Tiny Garden"; (b) "Song of India," Miss Marie Oliver.
7. (a) "Boy of Mine"; (b) "The Lord Is My Shepherd," glee club.
8. Piano monologue, "Soap," by Miss Alice Lookabaugh.
9. Class song, "Service for Others," by the Philaetha girls.

During the course of the program a silver offering will be taken, the proceeds to assist in their work of helping others. Their class motto is "Service for Others," and is a splendid one.

FRANK - JAMES NUPTIALS ARE ANNOUNCED

Daughter of Pioneer Resident to Marry Popular Entertainer

Announcements are out for the wedding of Miss Alice Frank, daughter of Mrs. Harriet Frank of 1558 East Wilson avenue, to Harry A. James, who has won much local fame as an entertainer and who is promoting a big moving picture enterprise.

The wedding will be celebrated Tuesday evening, April 18, in the Glendale Presbyterian church, with Rev. W. E. Edmonds officiating, and will be a brilliant event. Miss Frank is to be attended by four bridesmaids and a maid of honor, Miss Lorraine Mitchell, the bride party including four ushers and a best man, in the person of W. Van Valkenberg of Hollywood, well-known in Rotary circles for his Rotary songs, and who is also a scenic composer.

The bridal party is being entertained at a 6:30 dinner this evening by Mr. and Mrs. Danfel Campbell at their home, Ard Eavin on Highland avenue, and will also be the guests of Mrs. C. O. Pulliam Friday night, Saturday afternoon Mrs. John Allen Legge is entertaining for Miss Frank and her bridesmaids, and a week from Saturday Miss Frank, the bridesmaids and their mothers will be guests of Mrs. Ralph Meeker.

The Franks have long been residents of Glendale and have a host of friends here, particularly Miss Frank, who has talents that have always made her presence in great request at social affairs, and who was an efficient worker in many lines of Red Cross work during the war.

Mail Want Ad

Write your advertisement in the blank spaces below, just as you want it to appear in the Want Ad columns. Tell your story completely and convincingly if you want to accomplish quick results. Three days' insertion produces more replies than one; a week's insertion is best of all.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING RATES

First insertion—Minimum charge 30 cents, including four lines, counting five words to the line. Additional lines 5 cents per line.

Subsequent consecutive insertions—5 cents per line.

Minimum charge for each subsequent insertion, 15 cents.

..... closed

Glendale Daily Press Want Ads are accepted by telephone or may be brought to our office. This blank is for the benefit of the person who finds it more convenient to fill his "Want" by mail.

How to Figure Your Want Ad

Count five average words to each line. The address at the foot of your Want Ad is counted also. Each number, initial, etc., counts as one word. For example, the name, "John C. Smith," is three words; "212 W. Main Street" is four words; "160 acres, 3 miles from railroad, $300 per acre," is nine words, etc. In case you want a keyed or "blind" address used, instead indicate so above. The "blind" address comprises five words and will be counted as part of your advertisement.

K. OF C. PLANNING BIG BALL ON APRIL 22

Club House Committee Works on Financing of Permanent Home

The Knights of Columbus held their regular semi-monthly meeting Wednesday night at the Odd Fellows hall, corner West Broadway and Orange street.

The most important business transacted was the formulating of plans for the "hard times" hall to be held in the Odd Fellows hall Saturday, April 22.

The committee on arrangements is working hard to make the affair a grand success.

The matter of the new K. of C. clubhouse was also taken up. The clubhouse committee is now working on a plan for financing the proposed project, but nothing definite as to a site has yet been determined.

California Laws

Too Rigorous Says Leonard Compton

ALAMEDA, Calif., April 6.—California laws are too severe, in the opinion of Leonard Compton, adult probation officer of Alameda county. It is the severity of laws covering petty crime which is filling the jails and congesting the calendars of the criminal courts, Compton declares.

"In California a man who violates a law in nine cases out of ten faces San Quentin penitentiary," declared Compton. "His escape from the penitentiary lies in his being granted probation. There are only about a dozen offenses which are regarded as misdemeanors, and which are punishable by jail sentences. Assault, battery, bribery, carrying concealed weapons, gambling, petty larceny, and receiving stolen property are misdemeanors, except bribery and receiving stolen property, which may also be felonies.

"In other states offenses against certain laws are classed as misdemeanors, particularly in the case of first offense, and the criminals may be sentenced to not more than a year in the county jail. As a result of the California laws, the courts must have recourse to the probation office to avoid being too harsh. Rather than sentence a man to San Quentin, they place him on probation."

JAMES W. FOLEY

WHEN YOU'VE STUBBED YOUR TOE

Did you ever pass a youngster who had been and stubbed his toe, And was crying by the roadside sort of quiet like and slow; Who was holding of his dusty foot, all hard and brown and bare And trying to keep from his eyes the teardrops gathering there. You heard him give a little sob and saw him rub his nose, You stopped to pat his head and try to ease his boyish woes, You treated him with kindness and the first thing that you know He was up and off and smiling—clean forgot he stubbed his toe.

So along the way of life you see some fellow traveling slow And like as not you'll find he's some poor chap who's stubbed his toe; He was making swimming headway but he bumped into a stone, And his friends all hurried onward and they left him here alone. He's not sobbing hard or sniffling, he's too old for tears and cries, But he's grieving just as earnest if it only comes in sighs. And it does a lot of good sometimes to go a little slow And say a word of comfort to the chap who's stubbed his toe.

You're never sure yourself, and there's no earthly way to know Just when it's going to come your time to trip and stub your toe. Today you're smiling, happy, in the bright sun's heat and glow. And tomorrow you are shivering and you're trudging through the snow. Just when you think you've got the world the fastest in your grip, Is the very time, you'll find that you're the likeliest to slip. And it's mighty comforting to have some fellow stop, I know, And say a word of comfort when you've tripped and stubbed your toe.

As everybody is aware, it has long been a dream of certain enthusiasts to provide mankind with a universal language.

Under the impulse of this dream sundry languages have been invented, variously known as Esperanto, Ido, etc. Of these, Esperanto is the one of which we have heard most, and the merits of which have been most ardently urged by its advocates.

But it has commonly been taken for granted, by all except the enthusiasts themselves, that nothing like universal acceptance could be gained for Esperanto or any other language. And until lately there was abundant reason for this belief.

Today it is by no means so certain that the ideal of a universal tongue is impossible of realization. This was strongly impressed upon me by attendance at the recent Toronto meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

I found in the exhibition room back of Convocation hall a booth filled with books, magazines and pamphlets printed in Esperanto and in other invented languages aspiring to universality. And I found that a special meeting had been called to consider the report of a committee that had been investigating the possibilities and the progress of the universal language project.

In its report the committee drew attention to the following facts, little known or appreciated by the general public:

Accepted by every country of an identical auxiliary or secondary language, would undoubtedly promote world-wide diffusion of scientific data, and would facilitate exchange of thought between all nations.

In some European countries partial acceptance of such an auxiliary language has already been effected. Thus:

"This past year Esperanto was introduced as an optional subject in all the public schools of Milan, Italy, while for the present school year it has been made a compulsory subject in all of the public schools of Geneva, Switzerland."

Similar experiments in teaching Esperanto are being tried in schools in the north of England. Chambers of commerce in various countries and cities are showing steadily increasing interest in the subject. So are labor organizations. And it is under investigation by the League of Nations, the British Association for the Advancement of Science and academic bodies both in Europe and in America.

The committee, therefore, concluded its report by urging the adoption by the American Association of a resolution continuing the committee in its investigations and endorsing "the heretofore relatively neglected problem of an international auxiliary language as one deserving of support and encouragement."

Such a resolution was adopted. And, indeed, there could after all be no decisive reason why the different nations of the world should not co-operate to accept the Esperantist or some similar plan for an auxiliary language. The arguments are dominantly in favor of so doing.

Were an auxiliary language universally accepted, Americans, Englishmen, Frenchmen, Italians, Japanese, Chinese—all peoples, while yet retaining the language of their own land, would also possess a common medium for becoming better acquainted with the point of view, the ideas, the feelings, the aspirations, the difficulties and problems of one another. The result would be not merely a readier diffusion of scientific data, but greater friendliness between nations.

"Who knows most forgives most."

And:

"One cannot hate anybody one really knows."

It is as true of nations as it is of individuals that the more one becomes acquainted with another, the less the interest of international goodwill, public sentiment should emphatically support the efforts at systematically under way to secure world-wide acceptance of the universal language plan.

BUS FIGHT ISSUES JOINED

electric transportation companies throughout the United States and no one has even dared to suggest the curtailment of their use.

It points out that this fact gave birth to the use of the motor bus as a passenger carrier and that it has come to stay and is a recognized component of the electric lines and if its use results in the abandonment of other modes of transportation the only thing any city can do is to adopt the means that will best serve its citizens.

The brief states that the motorbus is already in direct competition with the Pacific Electric lines leading out of Los Angeles to other communities and that the granting of a permit to the city of Glendale to operate such a line would amount to only adding another competitive bus line. This line would be small as compared to the amount and volume of business done by the other lines and should not be suppressed simply because it is necessary to its existence that it must enter the city of Los Angeles.

The brief filed by the Pacific Electric company stated that in the event that the application of Glendale to operate a bus line is granted that the corporation will finally abandon the electric line now operated in this city and would also refuse to construct the tunnel from its Hill street station, ordered by the railroad commission to take care of the Hollywood situation. The brief filed yesterday by Mr. Gulick termed these suggestions of threats by the corporation as adroit threats which are outside the present issue. It states that even if it were a known fact that the proposed bus line would cause or precipitate the abandonment of the construction of said tunnel and that the Pacific Electric company would not be required to otherwise carry out its obligations to improve its service or that the business taken from the Pacific Electric company of its Glendale lines would result in the absolute destruction of its service, or in the shifting and loss incurred on the Glendale line to the patrons of other lines of the company, the citizens of Glendale would still say that the permit should be granted.

The brief maintains that the Glendale line is primarily a line for the benefit of the citizens of this city and that its abandonment is their concern and that the city of Los Angeles has no right to refuse the permit to use its streets on the grounds above stated. If this is the case the permit could be denied on any other ground, which, by the stretch of imagination or otherwise the city of Los Angeles could be inconvenienced or even lose financially.

To say all is not gold that glitters isn't necessarily an admission of guilt.

COMMISSION FORM URGED BY HEAD OF URUGUAY

Pres. Brum Declares Presidency Is Too Powerful for One Man

President Brum of Uruguay, urges abolition of his office and adoption of a commission form of government for republics.

He advocates a commission of nine, to be renewed by thirds every two years, to control all executive affairs of republics. He predicts that within a few years, a majority of the Latin-American republics will have done away with their presidencies and be controlled by commissions.

The change, according to President Brum may prove the antidote for sovietism.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, April 5.—(Copyright, 1922, by the United Press).—President Ballasar Brum took a position in the forefront of progressive world politics by declaring himself in favor of complete abolition of presidential office in republics, substituting a commission form of federal government, in an interview with William W. Hawkins, president of the United Press at the presidential palace here Saturday. He outlined a plan which might prove an antidote for sovietism.

The president carefully avoided saying he believed the reform should be applied in the United States but explained his views of the tremendous danger of concentration of power in the hands of a single individual, asserting most misfortunes of Latin-American republics had sprung from that cause.

Brum talked clearly, directly and unqualifiedly, asserting his desire to abolish the position he now holds, which gives him practically unlimited power. This was presented a phenomenon of human history, the president smilingly asserting his belief that his elimination would prove a great benefit to his country. Brum also said he considered the Washington arms conference had secured effective results for consolidation of world peace and the beginning of universal disarmament.

Referring to the strong friendship at present uniting all countries of Latin-America, the president said all hoped that from the understanding and good will of President Harding would come a happy solution of the Tacna-Arica question.

Brum, who is 38 years old, served previously as foreign minister, and traveled extensively in the United States. He is known as one of the most progressive of South American statesmen.

"The great obstacles to true electoral liberty is the institution of presidency in a republic," said President Brum.

"President of republics always tend to absorb power, and always try by every means within their reach to secure certain electoral results."

"Thinking of this," ex-President Batlle Y. Ordonez proposed to substitute for the office president of the republic a national commission elected directly by the people in a way closely resembling the government ruling Switzerland. Batlle believed that by electing, for example, nine citizens in order to form the commission, by direct secret vote of the people, it would be most unlikely that five of these would join so as to do ill to the country such as may easily occur with the government in the hands of a single man.

"The president of the United States does not make his power felt as do Latin-American presidents because in the United States the autonomy of individual states has a great effect and the influence of the president does not reach the point of entering into the internal affairs of the separate states."

"It would not be strange if during the present or next administration, our constitution should be so changed as to suppress the office of president of the republic and leave all executive power in charge of a national commission."

"A national commission, besides being a greater guarantee of success in the management of public interests has the advantage that minority parties can be represented so they will leave off revolutionary movements. A national commission formed of nine members could be renewed by thirds every two years, two members going to the party that obtains the greater number of votes, and one to the opposition party, or if there were more than two parties, the strongest could have two members of the commission, and the second strongest one."

"It will be seen that the defeat of party politics and the representation in the government and this satisfies it definitely with the hope of gaining, in the future, a majority of places on the commission."

SPANISH WAR VETERANS

The second meeting of Glendale Camp of United Spanish War Veterans since the organization received its charter was held last night in the headquarters of Glendale Post No. 127, American Legion.

A large percentage of the membership was present and two new members were initiated into the organization. Plans for the future work of the organization were discussed.

Listening in on Eve

FROM LUCILE'S DIARY

Yesterday morning Ruth Fitzpatrick telephoned me. I knew at once there was something amiss. "Don't be afraid of my feelings," I said cheerfully. "If there's anything on your mind, out with it, my dear!"

"Well, Lucile, you see Fitz is awfully particular to pay all our bills promptly, and I—that is, I think I must ask you to send a check for the frock you bought at Blink's on our account. I'm dreadfully sorry to bother you about it."

"That's perfectly all right, Ruth," replied. "I'll attend to it at once."

I decided that I would have to borrow from Cousin Fannie. She was helping Tilly clean the silver.

"What's all this?" I asked, picking up a shoe box full of bits of silverware.

"Oh, that is broken stuff and old fashioned things we never use any more," she explained. "Your mother suggested that I sort them out, so that they wouldn't have to be handled every time we clean the silver. Isn't that huge ladle quaint? That was Great Grandmother Guernsey's. When I was a girl, my grandmother always served oyster stew with it out of a big silver soup tureen."

"Where's the tureen, Cousin Fannie? Did this branch of the family get it?"

"Yes, it's up in the storeroom wrapped in tissue paper in a big hat box. It's dreadfully dented, but it's handsome."

"I believe I'll go and look at it just for fun," said. "Tell me just where it is."

She told me where to find the tureen and I flew upstairs and dug it out of our archives, which is my name for that storeroom full of old souvenirs. I was delighted to find in addition to the tureen a badly scarred old silver card receiver and a uniquely ugly ice water pitcher, all relics of the early General Grant period of American art.

This evening at dinner when Tilly brought in our individual dishes of soup, mother asked Cousin Fannie if she remembered the old Guernsey tureen.

"Why, yes, I was telling Lucile about it only yesterday. How did you happen to think of it?"

"It just occurred to me that it would be rather nice to get it out and have it repaired so that we could use it."

"Oh, mother, dear, nobody uses those huge old tureens now," I protested.

"Well, I think we'll revive the custom," she persisted. "It's a pity to have such a handsome old piece stuck away doing nobody any good."

"It isn't stuck away, mother. It's—it's—"

"What do you mean, Lucile? Of course it's up in the storeroom, where it's been for years and years."

Purely Personal

Mrs. Nellie Karns of 129 East Sycamore avenue, Eagle Rock, underwent an operation Wednesday afternoon at the Glendale hospital and sanitarium.

Mrs. F. Huff of 811 Orange Grove avenue underwent a major operation this morning at the Glendale hospital and sanitarium.

Glen Brandstater, son of Dr. and Mrs. C. A. Brandstater, is in San Francisco visiting his brother Oliver and will be away for several weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Justice of Illinois were guests last Thursday of Mrs. Anna Moore, 539 East Windsor road. They recently left for a visit to San Diego.

Mrs. Mary Ball of Illinois, who has been the house guest for 15 days of Mrs. Anna Moore, 539 East Windsor road, leaves today for her home in the east.

Howard Laudermilk and Mrs. B. Pearson of the Ranch Meat Market on North San Fernando road, entertained at chicken dinner Wednesday night, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ryan and daughters, Ruth and Ramona and son Richard, Mr. and Mrs. Roland Bagg, Miss Geneva Bagg, Miss Harriett Bagg, all of Glendale, and Rudolph Rosenberg of Burbank. An enjoyable evening was spent in playing "500."

Mrs. Clark Christy and infant son, who have been at the Glendale hospital and sanitarium, returned to their home at Downey Wednesday.

Mrs. Mary Thomas of 342 West California avenue, returned Wednesday from La Verne where she has been spending two weeks with her sister, Mrs. McClellan.

Dr. and Mrs. F. B. Storer and family of 1419 Gardena avenue were Sunday dinner guests of their daughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Harrison of Hyde Park. The affair was in honor of Mr. Harrison's birthday.

Mrs. Frank England of 120 West Burchett street who has been ill at her home for the past three weeks, is slowly improving.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Smith of North Louise street, had as their Sunday dinner guests, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Smith of Glendale.

Louis J. Ulrich, son of Mr. E. J. Ulrich of the Smoke Shop at 220 1/2 East Broadway, has just arrived from Tiffin, Ohio, and is making his residence at 216 Hawthorn street.

I see it every time we clean house. There are other old pieces of silver there, too."

"Not now, mother. They're all gone."

"Stolen."

"Oh, no, dear, not stolen. Just salvaged. They were doing no one any good, as you said, and I thought it was poor economics to let them lie there forever when the silver in them could be put into circulation, so I just—"

"Lucile, you don't mean to say that you have sold those old heirlooms for old silver?"

"Now mother, darling, don't be sentimental about those ugly things! Why should houses be filled with truck just because it belonged to one's great-grandmother?"

"But Lucile, you had no right to help yourself to that precious old silver," mother exclaimed.

"Well, dear, I don't see how you can miss things that you never see but twice a year when you houseclean and I thought you'd be glad to have the money that they brought. I had to meet an obligation, and I didn't wish to bother dear, generous dad, nor borrow of you or Cousin Fannie, so I just sold that silver. It was to be mine some day, of course. What does it matter whether I have it now or years hence when I'm too old to care for what I have?"

"Unless you undergo a complete and startling metamorphosis," said father, "that time will never come."

"You are absolutely incorrigible, Lucile," said mother, and I could not keep back my tears.

"I think it's cruel of you to say that to your only child," I sobbed, and father patted my head and suggested that the incident be considered closed. I know it hurts him dreadfully to hear mother heap reproaches upon me when we find ourselves at a divergence of opinion, which we so often do, for poor, dear mother is frightfully old-fashioned and conventional in many of her ideas.
